

Food Needs of Starving Europe Present Problems for America

(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

NEW YORK CITY, N. Y.—Should America send food to the starving, war-stricken nations of Europe which have been successfully invaded? Considerable controversy surrounds the answer to this question for it may be a vital factor in the outcome of the current war.

England fears feeding these nations would indirectly aid Germany and tend to neutralize the effectiveness of their blockade, but others disagree. Herbert Hoover successfully supervised distribution of food in Belgium during the World war and believes it can be done again. The "National Committee on Food for the Five Small Democracies" has been formed to carry out his plan.

The following article presents the committee's reasons why the "five small democracies" should be aided.

Food is a weapon but famine is a boomerang. Each is powerful and effective and, like all deadly arms, should be handled with knowledge and experience and not emotion.

The first reaction of the British government of October, 1914, to the proposal to feed Belgium was, in the words of Lord Robert Cecil, chief of Great Britain's foreign office, "directly counter to every dictate of military prudence."

But the British government later came to realize, in the words of Mr. Asquith, "that this relief food reaches the Belgians and the French, and reaches them alone"; while Lloyd George, speaking of "the work . . . for the allied and associated powers," said, "it has been of inestimable value."

They demonstrated their belief in its necessity by giving priority to relief shipments even over shipments of troops, munitions and food for the Allies.

This is a striking lesson from the annals of the World war and should cause us to explore deeply the facts of the present proposal before condemning to possible death 37 millions of people, as well as occasioning the inevitable concomitant diseases that will stop at no ideological, political or geographical frontier—not even the Atlantic ocean.

In the World war experience, the condition of starvation in Germany at the close of the war, as contrasted with the maintenance of the Belgian population in good health and without the loss of a life by starvation throughout four years, is eloquent proof of the fact that the blockade of Germany had been effective and in no way affected by the feeding of the occupied territories.

Outline Proposal.

What is the proposal? How was this effected last time? How could it be repeated?

The proposal is not to dump miscellaneous quantities of food into western Europe in the vague hope that they will be distributed exclusively among the conquered peoples. Nor is it an arrangement by which any imported food would release to the Germans equivalent quantities of native produce.

On the contrary, it is to set up a total administration under which all of the native produce would be mobilized, by centralization in the administration's warehouses, for the exclusive use of the civilian populations, and then to import only those foods in which there is a deficiency so as to make up a bare subsistence maintenance-of-life ration—precisely as was done in the World war. It is, further, that Germany contribute towards this program important quantities from her own supplies which she has produced or requisitioned.

Under such a plan, it is obvious that any leakages out of the total stores in sufficient quantities to affect the German food supply by any amount large enough to influence the German ration, and thereby the war, would be immediately self-revealing and very simple to check and to control.

A great deal of opposition to this plan is based upon the assertion that the Germans would not live up to any "guarantees" which they might give. But, curiously enough,

The 'Other Side'

Many persons believe that it would be impossible to satisfactorily supervise distribution of food sent to conquered nations of Europe. Among those who hold this view is Wallace R. Deuel, who has spent six years in Germany as foreign correspondent for the Chicago Daily News.

Recently a reader wrote him and asked, "If we could ship food through the blockade to the starving Belgians (for example) what percentage of it might we expect the Nazis to take?"

To this question he replied, "You might expect the Nazis to take either most or all of what you sent. If they refrained from taking the same food you sent they would take a corresponding amount of other stocks. The starving Belgians would, in either event, be little or not at all better off than they were before."

guarantees are of secondary importance and German national interest the primary factor. What are these so-called "guarantees"? Naturally, operations could only begin after the negotiation of an undertaking with the German government that they will abstain from seizing either native or imported supplies.

Small Help to Germany. But food alone would scarcely provide the motive for seizing the imported supplies. Native produce is hers for the taking, anyway. Germany is consuming today 1,400,000 tons of food a month; the invaded territories would need about 280,000 tons a month; foodstocks would be maintained in these countries (as they were last time) on a two-weeks' protection basis. Thus, if at any one moment Germany effected an all-embracing seizure from the North Cape to the French border, she would receive thereby exactly 72 hours of supplies for her 80 millions of people. And if she did, the flow of food would be cut off from one shipment to the next. There we see exposed, amazing and yet so obvious, the maximum menace to Britain—a three-days' supply of food for Germany!

Some believe that it is Germany's obligation to feed these people, but this also is inconsistent with the prevailing opinion of the German regime. The more ruthless one believes them to be the more obvious it is that they are not going to raise a finger to help their victims. We have heard of requisitions and leaks of food supplies during the World war, but the audited and published accounts of the commission that did that job reveal that throughout the four years of their operations there was not one single requisition;—at least, not one that was not replaced directly or in equivalent supplies. It is not improbable that there were small leaks such as have been cited in personal letters to the press; but when it is considered that over 11,000,000,000 pounds of goods were taken into the occupied territories, it is petty to raise these infinitesimal proportions of the total amount handled as an objection that may condemn these 37 millions of people to death.

Revolt Held Unlikely. Is it possible that if we do not feed these people they may revolt against their conquerors? Formerly, when there was less disparity between the weapons of an army and those of a mob this would have been possible; today, it is absurd to expect that a mob armed with scythes and pitchforks, hunting guns and knives, could withstand the weapons of modern warfare. Anyone who advances this theory is apparently unacquainted with famine which, far from emboldening men, slowly and progressively breaks their spirit and reduces them to impotence and utter apathy.

Some thought, too, must be given to the question as to whether it is not, after all, merely one of distribution and not of shortage in Europe. Agricultural experts reveal that Europe is normally 15 per cent short in her food supply. Due to one of the coldest winters on record last year followed by one of the wettest springs, there is a further shortage of another 15 per cent. Add to these the additional shortages due to war phenomena, such as the doubling of consumption immediately upon mobilization, the destruction of stocks, and the interference with sowings, cultivation and harvests, and it is obvious that the total shortage in Europe this year will be far over and above 30 per cent.

One proposal has been to send into these countries medicines and food concentrates for children. There is but one cure for famine and that is food and no amount of serums or medicines can ward off death by starvation. Such "relief" is but a saline solution, a prolongation of the agony.

No, either this thing is right and of no risk to England or it is wrong. If it is right, since we have a stake in this war which we are steadily increasing, it is our duty to raise our voice that at least a trial be made to save these millions of people of our own ideals and philosophy—especially when the risk, the worst that could happen for the British cause, is but 72 hours' supply for Germany.

The only alternative is to deny food to these victims of aggression, exposing them to dangers of starvation.

Valentine's Day

Greeting cards are very well
For the friends that you know well;
But we wrote some special verses
For these very famous persons.

TO THE PRESIDENT

We are "Your Friends," and we remind you
"You're the Boss" and we're behind you!
But now we must guard our every border
So please hurry that stuff you've got "on order"
For don't think you can stop our foes
With that little "piece of garden hose"!

TO WINSTON CHURCHILL

As long as you keep that "bulldog chin,"
Old Adolf knows he just can't win.
For just as long as you're the Boss,
The channel he won't dare to cross!
And when he's ready to finish warring,
John Bull's lion will still be roaring!

TO MUSSOLINI

With stubby jaw you stood on high,
To watch your legions marching by
But soon those boys will be back home!
The Greeks have shown them road to Rome!

TO HITLER

You're just a rowdy on the loose!
And someone's yet to "cook your goose!"
For you'll surely find, before you're through
You've bit off more than you can chew!

History Records Lives Of Seven St. Valentines

Any attempt to explain why valentines are sent on St. Valentine's day bumps into the question: "Which St. Valentine do you mean?" For history records not one, but seven St. Valentines.

Some historians believe that the observance is dedicated to all seven, while others specifically name the bishop of Terni and a Roman priest who were both burned at the stake by Claudius, Roman emperor.

NATIONAL AFFAIRS

CARTER FIELD

Federal contract-seekers have a new hurdle to clear—the Defense Commission . . . Political effect of opposition to Lease-Lend bill doubtful.
(Bell Syndicate—WNU Service.)

WASHINGTON.—National defense covers a multitude of sins, being spread out thin enough even to cover the old rivers and harbors pork-barrel situation. Back in the years just before World War No. 1 those bills were a scandal.

Then came the famous filibusters, led by Sen. Theodore E. Burton of Ohio, which gradually built up so much popular opposition to the pork-barrel system that it was changed.

The system gradually evolved for outwitting the pork hunters, and yet leaving some bacon for the boys in congress to take home to their constituents, and thus get re-elected, is something like this:

First, congress passes a bill directing the army engineers to survey a certain project. Then the engineers, with a weather eye cocked on future promotions, appropriations for their own service, and friendships on Capitol Hill, study the project.

In due time, the engineers report. Generally the report, strangely enough, is favorable, or at least can be so translated by its advocates.

AUTHORIZATION NEEDED

Now comes the second hurdle. The project must be authorized. That is, congress must specifically approve of the project being put on a list from which those actually to be done are to be selected. Then congress votes a sum, usually under $100,000,000 a year, to finance those projects which may be selected.

Note that congress no longer—as in the old pork-barrel days—actually makes the final decision as to which projects shall be done this year, and which shall wait, perhaps forever. That decision as to which projects pass this third hurdle is made by the engineers, always having in mind the elements previously mentioned.

Lots of projects on the "authorized" list will NEVER reach the pick and shovel stage. Everybody knows it, including its congressional backer. But at least he is able to boast about it—tell his constituents he is fighting to get federal money spent right there.

To these three hurdles the President has now added a fourth. Even if the engineers like a project on the authorized list, it must be sanctioned by the defense commission.

Because the pork barrel is still there, the smart pork grabbers on Capitol Hill have adapted themselves to the new rules. They have to do their trading with the White House, now, instead of with their colleagues.

So don't let the shock affect your heart when your senator votes for something the President wants that you know personally the senator thinks is cockeyed. He's just straightening out the national defense situation back in his state. Making the engineers, AND the defense commission, AND the President, see how important that dam on Podunk creek is to help Britain.

SPECULATE ON EFFECT OF LEASE-LEND BILL

While there is no desire on the part of most observers here to charge that opponents of the lend-lease bill to aid Britain are playing politics with national defense, there is a good deal of speculation as to what the effect will be when the political wheel does turn, as it has a way of doing.

At the present moment, as revealed in all sorts of ways, including the polls, the public is in favor of going to any necessary length to aid Britain by something approaching a three to one majority. Hence it might seem poor politics, regardless of other motives, for men who are ambitious for their own political futures to side with the minority.

This would be more important, so far as the senators are concerned, if that facing of the constituents had to be done SOON. As it is, even the next congressional election, when only one-third of the senators are up, is almost two years away, and two years in the present international situation is a mighty long time indeed.

RECALL 1920 ELECTION

In the 1918 election, it is recalled, certain popular figures who had opposed going into the war did not fare well. For example, Clarence C. Dill, a member of the house from Washington, was defeated chiefly because he had voted against the war declaration.

But in the 1920 election, just two years after the Armistice, the voters turned on the Democratic party very largely because of the war and peace conference aftermath.

So it is not enough to be with the majority at the time. If one is to succeed in politics one must be able to guess what the popular reaction will be a couple of years later. If you are just a voter, you can swing and right-about-face with impunity. But if you are an elected official you have to be a long-distance political weather forecaster.

CHAPTER XIV—Continued

"I don't ask much from you. Mighty little. I'm not asking now—I'm telling you. You'd better start at seven. Andrew will have the car ready."

Marian sighed. "I'm not trying to be tiresome, Mother. I want to help. If only you would see—"

"I've seen enough and heard enough. I'm tired. I've worked fourteen hours today and had trouble enough. Tomorrow you'll drive the car over to Hazel Fork—and I want to hear no more about it."

Marian set her chin. "Did it ever occur to you, Mother, that I might have something to say about the management of the mill? I'm a stockholder. I own as much stock as you. My father left it to me."

"I suppose," drawled Virgie, scornfully, "you'd like to have all the pulp dyed lavender!"

"There's this about it, Mother. If Tom voted with me—you wouldn't be keeping Branford Wills on to ruin our mill!"

Virgie stood tall. Her face had turned stony and white as death.

"And I suppose if I don't run things to suit you, you'll sell the mill to Wallace Withers—you and Tom?"

"I really think I have some rights, Mother."

"You have. It will be a relief to me, too, if you'll exercise them. You might vote to discharge me and hire somebody else to get out pulp. That would be a help. I'm worn to the bone and I could use some rest. You could also figure out where the pay-rolls are coming from and how that car of chemicals, with bill of lading attached, is going to be unloaded and paid for. I'd like a day in bed—and I could go to the movies. I've only seen a couple of shows since David died. Maybe I'll join the Little Theatre. Could they use a fat old woman with a more or less bass voice and broken-down arches?"

"Mother—you know I never meant—"

"No—you didn't mean that kind of authority. None of you ever do—the young, brash things who want to run the world! You want to give orders in an arrogant tone—but when it comes to getting out in the frosty woods at five o'clock in the morning or up on a hot slope in the middle of May, when there's a hundred acres of fire rolling down into your timber—no, you never mean things like that. You haven't linked up yet the old fundamental that along with authority goes a devilish lot of bone-grinding work. But maybe you're going to discard that, with all the rest of the old-fashioned fundamentals?"

Marian looked small and wan.

"I'm sorry, Mother. I'll go tomorrow. I'll be ready at seven. But—may I go to the Little Theatre meeting now?"

"Baby—"

Virgie faltered. She was imperious no more. She was a tired woman, with whitening temples. "If I have to fight you, too—"

Marian gave a little, strangled sob. "I'm horrible," she choked, "to talk like that to you—"

They clasped each other tight. And over her child's shoulder Virgie looked up at the pictured face of David Morgan, and her deep courage returned.

CHAPTER XV

The play was already being read when Stanley Daniels walked into the meeting of the Little Theatre group.

Lucy had begun it in her frail, sweet voice, but very promptly Marian Morgan had objected.

"Let Sally read, Lucy. We can't hear half that you say."

Lucy colored and stammered, smiling her nervous smile, handing over the book.

"I wouldn't be any good on the stage, would I?" She tried to laugh. "I try to make my voice bigger, but it just won't be. Begin that scene again, Mrs. Gallup."

Sally read dramatically. "Muriel—Muriel's the wife, isn't she? No, she's the polo player's wife. Where was I? Oh, yes—Muriel: And what if I told you that I hated you, Boyd?"

"You," Marian interrupted, "could do Muriel, Sally. Your voice suits that part."

"Where was I? Boyd lights a cigarette—who'll be Boyd?"

"Maybe Bill would."

"He wouldn't. If we talked him into it, just about the time the show was ready to go on, a wire would blow down or a turbine go wrong or something. Oh, here's Stanley. Hello, Stanley—listen to this part and see if you'd like to do it."

"But—there are several other plays," Lucy piped feebly. "They sent six on approval. You might like some of the others better."

"Go on, Sally," Marian prodded. "We'll never get through at this rate."

Lucy held her breath while Stanley Daniels took off his coat. She had maneuvered an empty chair and she glowed happily when he crossed the room and sat beside her.

"I don't like this play so much," she whispered. "I wish they'd read some of the others."

Sally's voice rose and fell dramatically. Lucy sank into a happy numbness. She was very tired, and she was unimportant to this group and knew it, and she did not greatly care so long as Daniels was near. She wondered if he would walk home with her, and nursed a jerk of panic for fear he wouldn't. They had so much to talk over—so much had happened at the mill—and here the small cold uncertainty that had tormented Lucy for days intruded again.

Had Daniels been a little odd at the mill—a trifle on the defensive? She hated harboring this uneasiness, but it would not down.

"I'm an awful fool!" Lucy scorned herself.

She made herself stop thinking about it, made herself stop looking at the backs of his hands, lean and slender and stained with chemicals. His cuffs were very clean. He was always clean, close-shaven, jaunty. She tried to listen to the play, but it was stupid and too sophisticated for a village audience, she decided.

Sally read gaily on. "Oh, listen—I love this! Muriel says, 'Why do we seem always to fall in love with the wrong people? Why does love go blundering through the world, Greg? Nothing else blunders—not death nor trouble—love gets straight to the mark—but love gets itself lost—finds itself in strange places where it was never meant to be.' I think that's a gorgeous line. Why don't we just decide on this play and send the others back?"

"It's so talky," Marian argued.

"Muriel is a good part but that Pam—she's washy, I think. Nobody could make Pam appealing."

"You could. Especially in this scene with Greg."

"That weepy thing? You know I can't weep. And Pam is always surrendering. Maybe English women surrender so gracefully—but I couldn't. And we haven't anyone to play Greg."

"Why not ask that new man? He's grand looking."

"He wouldn't be interested," Marian said, aloofly.

"You mean," Lucy was thinking, "you wouldn't be interested in having him?"

The meeting ended at nine, after some squabbling, with no decision arrived at.

"I must go," Sally said. "Bill's playing pool—he always loses and he'll get bored and mad after an hour of it. And we have such a glacially long way to go."

Lucy was nervous as she put the plays back into the envelope. Stanley Daniels helped her on with her coat, but he said nothing about walking home. Instead, he crossed the room and began talking to the other

Lucy's heart went down with a sick thump, though she made an effort at being gay as they all went down the stairs together. At the bottom she gave a little shiver and exclaimed, "Br-r-r! Cold. I'm glad I haven't far to go."

But Stanley Daniels had already hurried away, with a casual good night.

Lucy walked home rapidly along the dark little street. She knew every bush, every post, every rut in the cinder path, windows were lighted and people up and about, but she quickened her walk into a run. But this was not from fear. It was not fear that made her snatch the front door open, throw her hat into a chair, and rush to her own room. She had to get there before misery overwhelmed her.

Her purse fell on the floor as she flung herself on the bed. Tears ran down and soaked the pillow, and her thin shoulders shook. Nothing was any use. He didn't care—and who could blame him? This awful house—her awful clothes—her colorless personality. Even her voice was pale and uninteresting. He was sick of her—she had flung herself at him—oh, she had! No use denying it. A ragged sob tore past her lips.

"What's the matter with you?" Her mother in her faded outfiting nightgown and curlers was at the door.

Lucy burrowed deeper into the pillow.

"Nothing's the matter!" she wailed. "Everything's the matter! Go away! Oh, for heaven's sake, go away!"

Stanley Daniels walked rapidly. He was definitely worried. He had returned to his room at Mrs. Gill's, after the tense, upset day at the mill, to find a note on the hall table. Mrs. Gill drew his attention to it eagerly.

"He left it here about an hour ago. He said he'd come back. He said he wanted to see you about seven-thirty."

Daniels tore the cheap gray envelope open. A defensive, apprehensive anger made his face burn as he read the few lines.

"When he comes I won't be here. Tell him I had to go to a meeting. An important meeting."

"Maybe you better write a note," worried the landlady. "Maybe I'll get it wrong." She did not like offending people—not when she owed money on a note.

"No, I won't write any note. Just tell him that I had another engagement."

But as he hurried along the frozen street he had a feeling that things impended. It did not surprise him when he walked into his own room to find Wallace Withers sitting there in the one comfortable chair.

"Well, I waited, young feller," Wallace said. "I sent you word two or three times to come and see me, but you didn't take the trouble—so I came to see you."

"So I see," Daniels strove for nonchalance. "I've been busy. I intended coming but—" he hung up his overcoat carefully. "Was there something you wanted to see me about?"

Wallace Withers squared himself and fixed his hands in a pontifical gesture.

"Things have happened—you might say all that development I was talking to you about is about to come to a climax. The men who are in with me are ready to take—definite steps. We figure we're ready for a little co-operation now from you."

It was spoken pompously. Obviously, Daniels decided, the speech had been rehearsed.

Daniels' lips drew straight. His eyes moved away, grew guarded.

"And how am I supposed to co-operate?"

Wallace Withers liked an effect. He waited a moment, put on an expression of suave importance, spread his fingers on the backs of his hands.

"I am about ready to start some—extensive operations. Lumber—and pulp. From what I've heard from you I figured you might be ready to come along in with me. I expect to buy the Morgan mill. If Virgie holds out—and she's a hard-headed woman—we'll build a mill of our own, but I've got an idea that won't be necessary. And I'm counting on you."

"And how am I supposed to co-operate?"

Uncertainty, fear even, was cold in Stanley Daniels' veins, but he gave no sign.

"So—that's what you had in your mind? I wasn't impressed at first. I thought it was all—well, a lot of windy talk. But you had it all planned out."

Withers' lips folded and unfolded like the lips of a turtle.

"I don't waste time on windy talk," he said. "Not on young squirts like you. I talked to you because I had something for you to do—and you did it!"

Stanley Daniels sprang up. "I did nothing! I'm not in this. I'm not interested."

"Virgie," drawled the old man, "might figure different. And you better be interested. It means a future for you—or no future at all, you might say. I mean to go a long way in this business—I've got money in back of me and I'm not going to do any two-penny job of it. If you want to come along—all right. If you don't—"

"Then what?" Daniels' face was stiff and colorless.

Wallace Withers grinned and it was not a pleasant grin.

"Way I look at it—if you don't come in with me, there won't be any place for you to go."

"She won't sell."

"She'll sell—or quit! Even if she don't sell—you won't have a job any more!"

"So—that's the racket! Either I go in with you—wreck what I'm doing—or you wreck me? That's a threat, is it?"

"I don't aim to use words like that. I'm just giving you the best advice I know. And I'm making you a pretty good offer."

"An offer of what? A business that isn't established—a pipe-dream."

"You might find out it was a pretty strong pipe. You fellows," he waxed oratorical, "you young men think you know everything. That's your trouble. You don't give any man past forty credit for having any sense."

"I'll give you credit for plenty of sense—crook sense! I might have known what you were up to! You tricked me—got information out of me and now—"

"And now you're sort of squirming, ain't you, boy? Well, you needn't squirm. Not if you keep your head and look out for number one. I don't figure to talk—not to anybody. Of course, I could go to Virgie Morgan and tell her a mighty interesting story. But that won't be needful, if you keep your head—and anyway, I look for Virgie to be ready to listen to reason by another week."

"TO BE CONTINUED"

"Look here, if you think I'm going to—"

Withers ran his blunt, cruel-looking fingers through his hair.

"I'm not going to argue with you," he said. "And if you think you can make me mad, you ain't getting anywhere with it. It's been tried before. All you've got to do is tell Virgie you've got a better offer—tell her anything you please—but you're going to quit."

"And what if I don't?" Daniels was defiant.

Withers shook down his too-short sleeves, picked up his hat.

"You will," he said dryly.

He tramped down the stairs and Stanley Daniels heard the door slam.

Daniels stood still for a long minute, lit a cigarette and let it go out, then snatched up his hat. The air of the room was suddenly stifling. He pounded down the stairs.

In the parlor, with the asparagus ferns, the everlasting rummy game went on. Three salesmen were playing, slapping down cards, laughing loudly. The fourth player was Branford Wills.

Daniels stared, swore, went out quickly. So—he was spying was he—the heel, the interloper! A surge of fury burned through Daniels' body, then chilled, leaving him with a weight of cold nausea at the pit of his stomach. He found himself thinking of Lucy. Of her gentle eyes and her mothering ways and her loyalty. Suddenly he felt young and lonely and afraid.

CHAPTER XVI

Branford Wills stared at the car that waited in front of the Clark gate.

"So—you came!" he said.

Marian Morgan snapped the gear in place.

"Yes, I came. But don't let your ego expand. I'm not doing it for you. I'm doing it for my mother."

He climbed in, pulling his hat down over his eyes.

"I want to see some timber formerly belonging to Tom Pruitt, on Hazel Fork," he said.

"I suppose you know," she kept her eyes away and her chin up, "that the roads are likely to be bad over that way? We may get stuck."

"I'll look over the area on foot. I have some corners to check."

"All part of the great mystery!" She was scornful.

They drove in silence.

Mountain men in clean shirts, bound for the village store, walked the roads, indifferent to the raw chill. Marian spoke to each, knew all their names.

"Do you know personally every man in this end of the state?" he asked.

"I was born here. Most of these people sell pulp wood to mother. When my father was buried four thousand people came to the funeral."

There was, Wills thought, something fine and feudal and tremendous in that. Something that went back, as the traditions of these people went back, to the old countries none of them had ever seen, but which had stamped upon them, as the mark of all life is stamped upon the cell, the magnificent, aloof pride of tall Celts of the Wicklow and the Carrantual; of Highlanders from the shadow of Ben Nevis. Something of the old countries, in the way these men put their feet down, in the half bold, half feral glint in their eyes.

In Marian Morgan this defiant, separate thing was fined down to the cameo cut of her profile, the audacious tilt of her chin. The smoke of old peat fires was in the husk of her voice, there was something valiant about her that was like the ring of hunting bugles under Grampian cliffs, something of the resolute courage of men who had faced a new land from the ice-coated prows of sailing ships.

They passed the power lake and Wills remembered it. They stopped at the Gallup house.

Sally was reading the paper in pajamas. She opened the door only a chink.

"Heavens, you're early! Don't bring him in yet. Good gracious, Marian—I thought—"

"Don't think. I'm not bringing him in. I'm taking him across the ridge. Mother's orders. I want a bucket. Even as cold as it is, this car will heat on the grades."

"How heavenly—then you can sit back and look at all the pretty mountains while it cools."

"Don't be an utter idiot! Lend me a bucket. And we'll have to postpone the plays. I don't know the intent of this expedition, but mother thinks it's important."

"Marian, I don't own a bucket—only a terrible old huge thing Elvira uses to scrub. Could you use a stewpan?"

The road around the slope of the ridge was rutted and narrow, but from its twisting height Wills saw below him the tangled country through which on that last day he had stumbled, agonizingly, to Virgie Morgan's door. With a map-maker's eye he plotted the route, saw where he had turned off the high road, and beyond that the fire-scalded wilderness, grown head high with rhododendron and tangling vines, where through a night of sleet he had wandered.

IMPROVED UNIFORM INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL Lesson

JESUS TEACHES FORGIVENESS AND GRATITUDE

LESSON TEXT—Luke 17:1-4, 11-19.
GOLDEN TEXT—Be ye kind one to another, tenderhearted, forgiving one another, even as God for Christ's sake hath forgiven you.—Ephesians 4:32.

Did you ever hear of "vinegar saints"? They are the Christian folk who are "preserved" (as Paul prayed in I Thess. 5:23), but are apparently pickled instead of sweetened. Every housewife knows that things may be preserved with sugar or with vinegar.

God never intended it to be that way. All through His Word there are admonitions and encouragements to gracious and considerate living. Every Christian is under orders to "grow in grace" as well as in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ (II Pet. 3:18). This lesson stresses two leading Christian graces.

I. Forgiveness—Not Always Easy, but Always Possible (vv. 1-4).

The Bible is ever realistic in its approach to life. God knows that Christians must live in just our kind of world; in fact, your kind of world, and makes provision for it.

Offenses cannot be avoided. There will always be occasions for stumbling. No matter how closely we may guard our children, they will face temptations. Let us prepare them to meet them with the power of Christ, and let us be so prepared ourselves.

The fact that offenses must come does not excuse the one who creates the cause of stumbling. Someone is responsible for every such occasion for offense, and the woe of God is pronounced upon him.

What shall I do about the one who thus tempts me and others? Just grieve over it and look the other way? No indeed. "Rebuke him," says God's Word. Let us do it! If he does not repent, there is no occasion for forgiveness. To do so would only encourage him in his sin.

If he repents, or even says he repents, we are to forgive, not just once, but over and over again (v. 4). That's not easy for any of us, but it is possible if we, like the disciples (see v. 5), ask God to "increase our faith," and use it as Jesus directs in verse 6.

II. Gratitude—the Almost Forgotten Christian Grace (vv. 11-19).

Nine men wonderfully healed of the dreadful disease of leprosy, and only one said, "Thank you," to Jesus; and he was a Samaritan, an outsider or stranger. One wonders whether in our own day of professed enlightenment and culture the average of those who express their gratitude would even reach one-tenth.

"Gratitude is as scarce as friendship." Many there are who profess to be Christians who never offer praise to God for the provision of their daily food, let alone for all other temporal and spiritual blessings. The kindness of friends is taken for granted. The thoughtfulness of others is accepted without comment.

Have you told your minister that you appreciate his sermons and his ministry in the community? Does your Sunday School teacher know that you have received help and blessing in the class? Does the editor of this paper know that you enjoy and appreciate this column? If you do, why not encourage him by calling him on the telephone or writing him a note to tell him so?

Young people, have you ever said a real heart-felt "thank you" to your father or mother for all they have done for you? Perhaps some older sister or brother or school teacher or neighbor would be greatly heartened by such a word from you.

Someone may say, "I am grateful, but I am not the type that talks about it." One wonders whether Henry Van Dyke was not right when he said, "A dumb love is accepted only from the lower animals." A dog will show his thankfulness by wagging his tail, but a man has a tongue with which to say kind and tender words of appreciation to both God and man.

Most important of all, let us bear in mind that God awaits our words of praise. Christ valued the words of gratitude of this man and missed them from the nine others. When He was in Simon's home (Luke 7:44-46), He gently rebuked His host for failing to show him the ordinary courtesies of the household.

Appreciate Beauty

Never lose an opportunity of seeing anything beautiful—welcome it in every fair face, every fair sky, every fair flower and thank Him for it who is the fountain of all loveliness; and drink it simply and earnestly with all your eyes; it is a charmed draught, a cup of blessing.—Kingsley.

Bible Is Valuable Guide

I have read it (the Bible) through many times; I now make a practice of going through it once a year; it is a book of all others for lawyers as well as divines, and I pity the man who cannot find in it a rich supply of thought and rule for conduct.—Daniel Webster.

DRAMATIC REVIEW OF A 1941 INCOME TAX BLANK

"You Can't Take It With You" or "Tax Blank for 1941" has had its presentation before the American public, and, while it met with a mixed response, your reviewer would describe it as adequate. It is a straight, direct, merciless, tightly written affair which, despite muddling passages here and there, gets its message across. That, after all, is its purpose.

"Tax Blank for 1941" is in a sense a revival. It follows the pattern of other years but has been extensively rewritten, with many new lines and some startling effects, particularly that part of the narrative where it is discovered that Jonathan Q. Doe, our hero, supposing he gets the same exemption as in the past for being a married man, finds the exemption has been cut from $2,500 to $2,000. This is an obvious slap at matrimony, and, since it is a widely cherished institution, we do not think the authors have done a service to society by belittling it in this way.

A moment of high drama comes in a bleak scene laid in the Upper Brackets country.

Here we have the same heavy mood of anger, pain and despair so characteristic in previous years. Seldom has there been a more moving scene than when T. Dudley Softtouch and Luther Gettahead come face to face with Paragraph 6, Item 7, Page 4 and find that on the same income as they had last year they must now pay a surtax of almost twice as much. Here is action belonging to the sternest school of realism.

Perhaps the peak of emotion comes in a little scene where Softtouch, almost a mental wreck after having finally figured up what he owes the government (with the help of six lawyers), is about to make out a check when he suddenly discovers that congress has placed a separate defense tax of 10 per cent on top of all! For a moment this reviewer thought the performance had all the elements of a fiasco of "Hellzapoppin'" and "Macbeth."

Screams penetrated the rafters and seldom have such lines as "They can't do that to me," "This is an outrage" and "It's that feller in the White House" been delivered with such power and feeling.

There is both drama and comedy in the later chapter when millions of Americans in the lower income group, who have been laughing at the upper groupers all these years, discover that at last they must come across too.

All in all (and that's the way they take it now), the production is sure to have the usual appeal, coupled with the additional response always occasioned by the surprise note. Your reviewer must say in all candor that "Tax Blank for 1941" lacks laughs. There is hardly an amusing line anywhere if you exclude the old gag, "Were you damaged by fire or storm during the last fiscal year?" But it is set for a run lasting through to next December 15. Nothing can stop it.

Bill Pfriender says that Mr. Roosevelt's broadcasts these days might be billed as "Firearms Chats."

Wendell Willkie has now gone over to the administration side so completely that some people are even speaking of him as Wenlin Wiloo-velt.

New York city will have a population of eight to nine million people ultimately, an expert says. It is hard to imagine that many people running around asking questions on how to reach destinations in New York city.

The annual National Automobile show has been abandoned for this year. The public will have to find some other good excuse for

Tinley Park Community NEWS

A large group of Epworth Leaguers of the Tinley Park and Frankfort Methodist churches attended a roller skating party sponsored by the Leagues at the Saenger Hall on Tuesday night. All report a most delightful time.

The Methodist church parlors filled with a big crowd Thursday night, the occasion being "Jigg's Special"—corn beef and cabbage supper, and was it ever good!

The Big Seven Baseball League in which Tinley Park ball players are very vitally interested are planning for a big season this summer.

The Leroy family who have been residing in the Rodgers place are moving to the Lincoln Estates.

The Tinley Park Board of Education will hold their regular monthly meeting at the school next Tuesday night.

The Lenten Season will begin on February 25th.

The Tinley Village Board met on Tuesday night. The regular routine business was transacted.

George Wannemacher who has been living in the Stelter place, has moved to Tinley Park.

Mrs. J. M. Studer of Tiskilwa, Illinois has moved to Tinley Park. Mrs. Studer is the widow of the late J. M. Studer, one time Rock Island agent at Tinley Park.

TAWANKA CAMPFIRE GIRLS
 The Tawanka Campfire Girls under Mrs. Maxwell's guardianship, held their election of officers Friday, Feb. 7, resulting as follows:
 President, June Willman
 Vice-President, Pearl Swanson
 Secretary, Alfreda Willman
 Treasurer, Mary June Consineau
 Scribe, Elva Olson
 Sergeant-at-arms, Margaret Bartholomew.

The meeting was held at the Willman home. After the meeting refreshments were served. The assistant guardian, Mrs. Johnson, could not attend due to illness.

CHESKHAMAY CAMPFIRE
 The Cheskhamay Campfire Girls held their meeting at their guardian's home, Mrs. C. Crist, Monday of this week. A ceremonial was held and honor beads were presented to Charlotte Baltrusch. She was ill at the time the first ceremonial was held.

All girls were presented Campfire beads. These beads are of unusual hand carved design, being imported. none had been received before of the war. These are the first beads received by the Chicago Council for sometime.

We held our second election of officers with the following results:
 President, Lorena Eaton
 Vice-President, Jo-Anne Schmidt
 Secretary, Charlotte Baltrusch
 Treasurer, Anna Mae Stockman

 Mr. and Mrs. DeValk attended the funeral of a friend in Chicago Monday.

Mrs. E. Wannemacher was hostess to the Tinley Park bunco club in her home Thursday afternoon. Prizes were awarded to the winners.
 Twenty-five guests from Chicago and Tinley gathered in the home of Mr. and Mrs. P. Yarmark last Saturday evening to help them celebrate their 25th wedding anniversary. Dancing and singing was the evening's pastime. A bounteous turkey repast was served at nine o'clock. A lovely wedding cake was the center of attraction. The honored couple received many beautiful silver gifts.

Monday afternoon, Mrs. Wm. Wannemacher entertained the Sewing Club at a Lincoln's Birthday party. Mrs. Minnie Goessel and Martha Dunn were guests. The ladies sewed and crocheted very diligently. In the evening The Hat Shop Bunco Club met with Mrs. Wannemacher; the affair being a Valentine and Washington party. Each club member was allotted in a short child's dress, depicting themselves as juveniles. Bunco was played, at which each received a prize. Refreshments were served. All had a most happy time.

The Royal Neighbors held the social meeting in the Methodist church parlors Tuesday evening. After the business session, a mock wedding was held in honor of Mrs. Yarmark's 25th wedding anniversary. This was a surprise for the honored member, especially as she was asked to bake a wedding cake, thinking it was for someone else, and when she saw her cake being served as refreshments later in the evening she was still more surprised. Those taking part in the mock wedding were: Mrs. A. Clemens, bride; M. Cteinhagen, groom; E. Wannemacher, best man; F. Cerehaml and A. Hopman, bridesmaids; A. Schantz, flower girl; H. Chapman, train bearer; E. Stockman, ring bearer; L. Rogers, parson. The evening's hostesses were: Mesdames, A. Mesenbrink, L. Moss, A. Nielsen, Orcott.

Supervisor Carrie Krueger and two members of her Camp were guests.

The LEASE-LEND BILL: As this column is being penned the so-called lease-lend legislation is approaching a final vote by the House of Representatives. It is expected to pass the House by a majority of at least 50 votes. In the mean time at the other end of the Capitol, the Senate Committee on Foreign Relations heard several prominent citizens testify in opposition to the lease-lend bill. Colonel Robert R. McCormick, publisher of the Chicago Tribune, Colonel Charles A. Lindbergh, General Robert E. Wood, head of the America First Committee and Major Al Williams, aviation expert were among those who gave the Committee the benefit of their views. Colonel McCormick in a very well prepared resume' of the situation demonstrated to the Committee how impossible it would be for our nation to be successfully attacked. Said Colonel McCormick, "It is fantastic to suggest that we are in any danger of attack. Even if we did not have these overwhelming strategical advantages, this panic over possible German attack would not be justified." Major

Williams, well known aviation authority, charged that the Administration is guilty of "persistent promotion of hysteria;" and that by its stripping our own nation of its airplanes it has reduced American air power to a "myth," and that talk of any successful air, naval or land invasion of the United States is "pure nonsense and fantasy."

TODAY'S TIP TO BRIDES:

Let the telephone help make housekeeping easier.

• Here's how! . . . After breakfast, telephone your orders for groceries and other supplies—then call the laundry or tailor or hairdresser or any other needed service.

Next, use the telephone to reach the store or shop where you've seen a "good buy" advertised. You save time by letting your telephone run errands—and have more leisure for other interests.

And don't forget your husband—your girl friends—the neighbors. There's a cheery word waiting on your telephone line, whenever you're lonesome. Help in a hurry can be had too.

MORAL: Don't be a wife-without-a-telephone. . . . The telephone is an active aid, a willing servant, a friend in need. It costs so little and helps so much! . . . Illinois Bell Telephone Company.

Milk Helps to Keep Me Feeling Young

When the cares of household work seem to be getting me down, I do the refreshing thing. A tall glass of MARTI'S MILK or a cup of warm milk! Delicious tasting. Restores energy. Makes everything right again.

Next time you feel a bit fagged, try my best home remedy. Try a frosty glassful of rich MARTI'S MILK. It's so inexpensive, so good..... a quart a day keeps gloom away. Try a glass now!

HOMER

Mrs. Fred Kopelman

Matthew H. Homerding, born and raised in Homer, passed away Thursday morning at the home of his son Walter in Lockport after a lingering illness.

Mr. Homerding was born on May 10, 1861 in Homer Township and has been a resident of Homer almost all of his 79 years.

Surviving are three daughters, Mrs. Andrew (Ruth) Ludwig of Orland Park, Mrs. Theresa Hemphill of Lockport, Mrs. Walter (Susan) Gray of Joliet and one son Walter G. of Lockport; a son Earl of Homer preceded his father in death four years ago. There are 14 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

Funeral services were held Saturday morning from the home to St. Dennis church.

The committee appointed to have charge of the February Community club party is Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wies, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Reiter and Mr. and Mrs. Henry Winke.

The Woman's club will meet Wednesday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Emma West, with Mrs. Bertha Loucks acting as co-hostess.

The Wayside Workers Circle of Kings-Daughters met Thursday afternoon in the home of Mrs. Raymond Carlson in Joliet, with Mrs. Madge Storm assisting. Twenty members and guests were present. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Harry Parker. Mrs. Burnett had charge of the devotionals and Miss Myra Reed gave a reading from the Silver Cross magazine. Refreshments were served and a social hour enjoyed.

Mrs. George Gebert was honored at a surprise party by a group of friends Saturday night in celebration of her 75th birthday anniversary. Cards and buncos were played and refreshments served.

Joseph, the small son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller, Jr., who has been very ill at the Silver Cross hospital the past three weeks, was moved to the home of his aunt, Mrs. Hurley in Mokena. His mother, Mrs. Miller is staying at the Hurley home for a few weeks until the baby is much better.

The Young People's Fellowship group will meet Sunday evening for their regular meeting. Mrs. Raymond Carlson will lead the services for the older group and Reed Lynn Burch the younger group. June Milton will have charge of the devotionals.

Services will be held in the Congregational church Sunday afternoon. Sunday school will begin at 2 o'clock and the church service will begin at 2:45 o'clock with the Rev. C. E. Wolsted in charge.

The Bible class of the Sunday school are sponsoring a Father and Son banquet on Tuesday night, Feb. 25. Anyone wishing to secure tickets can receive them from J. T. White, Lee Burnett, Henry Rodgers, C. G. Rowley, Robert Burch, George Bump, Rev. C. E. Wolsted or Willard Rowley, men members of the class.

The committee in charge of planning the banquet, met in the home of Mrs. C. G. Rowley Monday afternoon. The dining room committee will meet next week to make plans.

A large number from this vicinity attended the Farm sale at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rimke Friday. Mr. and Mrs. Rimke and family will now make their home near Mokena.

Miss Mary Lou Hutson of Mokena spent the week-end at the home of her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Miller.

Mr. and Mrs. C. G. Rowley and daughter, Miss Betty were dinner guests Sunday at the Elmer home in Chicago Heights.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Bump were five o'clock dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bump in Joliet.

LeRoy Volrath suffered painful injury to his middle finger of his right hand while at the Ales Gravel pit last week.

Miss Monna Milton of Chicago spent Monday with her parents here.

A group of young people from this vicinity enjoyed roller-skating at Renwick last night. In the group were Jean Miller, Eleanor Kopelman, Monna Milton, Florence Konow, Kate Warmsholdt, Earl Kopelman, William and LaVerne Kasper, George Milton, George Konow and Reed Lynn Burich.

A wedding of much interest to Homer people is that of Walter Corp and Miss Iona Maltby of Plainfield. Walter has lived the most of his life in Homer so is well known here.

The wedding ceremony took place in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Darius V. Maltby. Rev. L. D. McGladrey, pastor of the Methodist church read the marriage ceremony and Mrs. McGladrey played "I Love You Truly" and also "Lohengrin's Wedding March."

The bride was attractively attired in blue and white print silk and had a corsage of pink and white carnations.

Miss Helen Maltby who attended her sister, wore a powder blue crepe dress and had a pink carnation corsage. Robert Corp, brother of the groom, acted as best-man.

Decorations in the home for the occasion were white flowers, carnations and lighted blue candles. Only the immediate families witnessed the ceremony.

Following the ceremony dinner was served at the Twin Elms Tea room. Later the young couple left on a southern honeymoon. The bride was traveling in a moss green suit with matching hat and black accessories. On their return they will be at home on a farm near Caton Farm.

Many people in this vicinity have received invitations to a card party and dance given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Corp's wedding and the twenty-fifth wedding anniversary of their parents Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Corp.

ORLAND PARK

Dick Hill, aged 65 years, a former Orland resident, dropped dead of a heart attack in a Chicago tavern last Saturday.

The deceased used to work for the Wabash railroad when they had a round house in Orland Park.

Mr. Hill went to live in Chicago in 1921.

Mr. and Mrs. John G. Loebe attended the 55th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Loebe in West Bend, Wisconsin Sunday. A fish dinner was enjoyed at Port Washington, Wis.

SCHOOL NEWS

The home economics department has recently received a new model electric Singer Sewing machine. This brings the total to 3 new models. These machines along with the four new cork top cutting tables, make very excellent sewing equipment.

The members of the Industrial Arts class are making new tool boards and reconditioning equipment. This project has been under way since before Christmas when it was interrupted by the Christmas toy project.

The characters in the school play, "The Scarecrow Creeps", which will be given in March are as follows: Adam Throgg, the butler, Jack Jeddicka; Maude Hobbs, the maid, Eleanor Cooper; Roderick Gage, master of Gage Manor, Howard Braasch; Dr. Kenneth Gage, his nephew, Eugene Uthe; Aunt Zinnie Washington, darky cook, Marion Peters; Trailing Arbutus, her son, Wm. Maddox; Perry Gage, Roderick's nephew, Robert Estand; Mrs. Annabelle Gage Perry's mother, Betty Yunker; Miss Amelia Gage, Roderick's first cousin, Ruth Gee; Norman Gage, her niece, June Schussler.

The Roaring Tigers won the basketball game played at Tinley against Manhattan Friday night by a score of 35 to 29.

It was a close and interesting game.

MANHATTAN 44 ORLAND 30
In spite of Orland's height and age advantage, Manhattan's flashy midgets overcome Orland in the 4th quarter in their game at Tinley last Friday evening. While Manhattan's team experienced difficulty getting through Orland's defense in the first three quarters, they provided no serious defense of their own. However they were alert and intercepted many of Orland's long passes and converted them into first quarter baskets with an accurate passing, fast-break style of game. Orland's defense against fast break offense was weak, though their defense against set plays worked satisfactory.

Orland played without one of its regular forwards, Pete Uthe. Chuck Maddox was back for the first time since early in the season. He played a fine defensive game and connected with a couple of one-handed shots in spite of his bandaged hand. The team was handicapped by the fact that Franklin E. Uthe was only able to play part time due to a recent illness. The forwards, Norman Jorgensen, and Bob Arnold gave a good account of themselves in under-the-basket play. Bill Maddox played a good game at guard position. Milton Francis held down one of the guard positions creditably for the short time that he was in the game. Bob Newson returned to form by contributing 15 points to the score in addition to covering his defensive territory well.

Be sure to come to the games this Friday, the 14th at 6 at Tinley. Orland is playing the Glenwood Manual Training School. These games will be preliminary to tournament games scheduled for the same evening at Tinley.

Three games this week for the Lucky Strikers. Is it luck, good bowling, or are the other teams down in spirit?

The Nine Pins took two games from the Dubs. What happened to you Mary? The score did not look like your bowling. Are you slipping? Talk about slipping, there must be something wrong with the Wonder Girls that they could not take one game from the Lucky Strikers, when two of their star bowlers were missing.

there are such things as constitutional monarchies where the people have a large degree of republican or representative government, as in England. Greece tried democracy for a brief period and found she was unequal to it. The Greeks don't even want self-government. They crave a domestic yoke.

In April 1924 the Greeks voted for a republic 758,000 to 325,000. A year later General Pangalos seized the government and assumed dictatorial power. He lasted for 14 months. Then the general was overthrown by an admiral who ruled without an election for 3 years. In 1929 the Greeks elected a president and re-elected him—once. That was enough.

In some other countries the democrats lost to a Man on Horseback. Not the Greeks. In November 1935, in a time of peace, they actually voted to restore the monarchy by a vote of 1,491,992 to 32,454. Only two in one hundred cared enough for a republican form of government to vote to keep it. The King's party carried every precinct. The democrats didn't even have a Maine or Vermont. Well, that's their business, not ours.

The next year martial law was proclaimed and General Metaxas became dictator. That was four years ago, and three years before Hitler began to shoot. It has continued as an outpost of the British foreign office.

The Fascists in Italy abolished the 80 year old Chamber of Deputies but set up in its place a Chamber of Fasci and Corporations with 650 members. It is a sort of Punch and Judy show with Il Duce pulling the strings. Nevertheless, they do go through the motions. The puppets do vote.

I'm all for the Greek dictator throwing the Italian dictator into the Adriatic. Mussolini played with matches. And that is a serious offense in a powderhouse world.

Albania, like Greece, also voted to abolish her republic and establish a monarchy, twelve years ago. President Ahmed Beg Zogu became King Zog. Mussolini upset his majesty in April 1939.

Fellow democrats, ours is a Holy Mission! Our hearts burn with a Noble Zeal! American bayonets must restore Greece to his throne! We must force Greece to be free! It is true that corrupt city machines are aggressors against our free institutions; that mass bribery of millions exists; that other millions can find no work except to make guns. But these things can wait. We must put first things first! And in the words of our immortal dead, Foreigners are First in War and First in the hearts of Our Countrymen!

In the list of the right honorable democracies we next come to Abyssinia and China. The first at no time had even squatter's rights to the name. China is called a republic but by our standards you would not recognize it. It is a one party affair, as much so as the Nazi party in Germany, or the Communists in Russia. The party appoints the councils which exercise the power of government. Free election of public officials by universal suffrage, as we know it, does not exist.

The war party may get us in. And will unless we flood Washington with indignant protest. Self defense or world wide imperialism. We understand that. But I am getting jolly well fed up with their come-on that American boys should die once more for foreign democracies, dictators, or Zogs.

GUARANTEED TO GET THE FAMILY UP IN THE MORNING
(See Recipes Below.)

BREAKFASTS TO GET THE FAMILY UP

"The nice thing about breakfasts" said one newlywed, "is that you don't have to plan them, you just serve them." Although it is possible to get a breakfast with whatever there is at hand in the line of toast, coffee, and fruit juices, a little planning does yield big dividends.

For it is planning that makes possible the breakfast specialties that get the laggards out of bed in the morning—and down to eat before they go. And that's important, because they miss the Vitamin C in the orange or tomato juice when they skip breakfast, the Vitamin B in the whole grain cereal, the iron in the egg yolk, which aren't always made up later in the day.

A sketchy, hurried breakfast, or none at all, accounts, too, for some of that mid-morning fatigue. It's a long time to go without food, from six o'clock of one night until noon of the next day.

Here, then, are some breakfast menus, and some recipes for new breakfast specialties, that are guaranteed to get the family out of bed in the morning. Just let them get one whiff of a platter of shiny brown sausages garnished with orange slices, like that in the picture above, and no coaxing will be needed to get them down to breakfast.

QUICK BREAKFAST

Chilled orange juice
Hot cornflakes over banana wedges
Oven eggs in cornbread cases
Pan-fried bacon
Coffee, milk

LEISURELY BREAKFAST

Grapefruit halves
Bran flake cereal with brown sugar and cream
Apricot omelet
Buttered toast
Coffee, milk

Raisin Sally Lunn's.

(Makes 2 dozen 2-inch Lunn's)

1 cup milk
1 cake compressed yeast (½ ounce)
3 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon salt
¼ cup melted shortening
2 eggs
3 cups sifted flour (all-purpose)
¾ cup raisins

Scald milk and cool to lukewarm (85 degrees Fahrenheit). Add crumbled yeast, sugar, and salt. Add 2 cups flour, beating thoroughly. Add melted shortening and beaten eggs. Add remaining flour, beating until smooth. Add raisins. Fill greased muffin pans full. Brush with butter (if desired), cover and set in warm place to rise until doubled in bulk (about 45 minutes). Bake in moderately hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 15 minutes.

Eggs in Corn Bread Cases.

(Serves 6)

6 squares or slices corn bread
¼ cup butter (melted)
6 eggs
Salt
Pepper

Cut off top crusty portion of corn bread. Then remove part of corn bread from each slice, forming a depression. Brush top of each slice with melted butter. Break an egg into each depression. Sprinkle with salt and pepper, place on baking sheet and bake in hot oven (475 degrees Fahrenheit) for 10 minutes or until white of egg is set. For quick breakfast, corn bread should be prepared the day before.

Grated Apple Waffles.

(Makes 8 waffles)

1½ cups flour (all-purpose)
½ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons baking powder
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1¾ cups cooking apple (grated or cut fine)
3 tablespoons melted shortening

Sift flour once before measuring. Then add salt, cinnamon, sugar, and baking powder and sift again. Separate eggs. Combine milk, eggs, and cooled melted shortening. Add dry ingredients to milk and egg and stir lightly until just dampened. Fold in grated apple. Beat egg whites until stiff and glossy and fold in, using a spatula. Bake on pre-heated waffle iron and serve with butter and brown sugar.

Corn Bread.

(1 8-inch square)

1½ cups yellow corn meal (uncooked)
½ cup flour (all-purpose)
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup milk
2 eggs (beaten)
2 tablespoons fat (melted)

Sift corn meal with flour, baking powder and salt. Combine milk, eggs, and shortening and add to dry ingredients. Bake in a well-greased 8-inch square baking pan, in a moderately hot oven (400 degrees Fahrenheit) for 40 to 50 minutes.

Bran Griddle Cakes.

(Makes 15 cakes)

1½ cups milk
1 egg (well-beaten)
2 tablespoons melted fat
1½ cups flour (all-purpose)
½ teaspoon salt
2½ teaspoons baking powder
1 tablespoon sugar
½ cup bran cereal

Combine milk, beaten egg and cooled melted fat in mixing bowl. Sift flour once before measuring. Then add salt, baking powder, and sugar and sift again. Combine dry ingredients with bran cereal. Add to milk, stirring until just mixed. Bake on a hot griddle and serve with butter and strained honey or maple syrup.

Apricot Omelet.

(Serves 4)

½ pound dried apricots
1 cup water
½ cup sugar
2 tablespoons quick-cooking tapioca
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons butter
4 eggs

Prepare apricots ahead of time. Cover them with water and let soak 30 minutes. Then simmer until tender, about 25 minutes. Add sugar and cook for 3 minutes more. To make the omelet, drain juice from the apricots and measure. Fill to the ¾ cup mark with water, if necessary. Combine tapioca, salt and apricot juice in top of double boiler over boiling water and cook 10 to 12 minutes. Add 1 tablespoon butter, remove from heat and cool. Separate eggs. Beat whites until they are stiff and will stay in a partially inverted bowl. Without washing beater, beat yolks until thick and lemon-colored. Add egg yolks to tapioca mixture, then lightly fold in egg whites.

Melt 1 tablespoon butter in large frying pan (10 inch). Turn in egg mixture. Cook over low heat for 5 minutes, then place in a moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) to finish cooking for 15 minutes or until golden brown on top and firm to the touch. Make a shallow cut across the omelet at right angles to the pan. Cover half the surface with finely cut cooked dried apricots. Fold over omelet, turn out onto hot platter and serve at once.

Codfish Toasts.

(Serves 4)

2 tablespoons butter
2 tablespoons flour
1 cup milk
2 eggs (hard-cooked)
1 tablespoon green pepper (minced fine)
1 cup shredded codfish (freshened)
Few grains white pepper
Few grains onion salt
4 slices bread
½ cup grated cheese

Melt butter and add flour. Stir to make a smooth paste. Add milk. Dice eggs and add to milk mixture together with green pepper and shredded codfish. Season with white pepper and onion salt. Toast bread on one side, cut in half diagonally and place codfish mixture on untoasted side of bread. Sprinkle with grated cheese and brown lightly in a hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit). Body Width and Blood Pressure Relationships

By DR. JAMES W. BARTON
(Released by Western Newspaper Union.)

FOR years life insurance companies have been publishing height and weight tables. Because of the differences in build of individuals the companies have advised examiners to accept underweight and overweight candidates for insurance according to whether they are narrow or wide in build.

If they are of the narrow or greyhound build, they can subtract 10 pounds from the weight recorded on the tables for their height; if they are of the wide or bulldog build, they can add 10 pounds to the recorded weight for their height. This means, then, that a narrow man 5 feet 7 inches in height can weigh 139 pounds and a wide man of the same height 159 pounds and both are considered normal in weight.

Insurance statistics definitely show that the narrow individuals live longer than the wide ones and we are told that this is not because wide individuals are not as strong (because they are usually stronger physically), but because they eat too much for the amount of work done or exercise taken. Wide individuals by overeating are more frequently attacked by heart vessel, liver and kidney ailments. Thin individuals, on the other hand, usually eat less and because they have no excess weight, are more apt to be active physically.

Blood Pressure 'Types.'

Some interesting results from an investigation of the relation between body width and blood pressure are recorded by Drs. S. C. Robinson and M. Brucer, in American Journal of Medical Science. They divided their patients into six groups, from the very narrow to the very wide. They found that few of the narrow type had high blood pressure whereas many of the wide individuals had high blood pressure. The shape or build of the individual is related, as definitely shown by the figures, to blood pressure.

The thought then for wide individuals is not to allow themselves to become overweight, because their blood pressure is naturally high owing to their wide build.

Asthmatics Should Study Their Make-Up

TODAY, while the cause of some cases of asthma is unknown, a cause for the majority of cases can be found if diligent search be made. Research workers are now agreed that asthma is not a disease but a group of symptoms with not one but a number of causes.

Drs. P. De Bersaques and A. Berat, in Archives of Medicine-Surgery, Paris, stress the importance of the "constitutional" factor as an underlying cause of asthma and show that effective treatment can be realized only when the complex problem of the makeup or constitution of the asthmatic is clearly understood.

A study of 40 cases showed that there were three factors in the cause of asthma all of equal importance: (1) The respiratory (nose, throat, lungs) factor, (2) the instability (easily upset) of the nerves controlling the organs of the chest and abdomen, and (3) the liver factor.

Having these three causes in mind they proceed to treat asthma from the three different standpoints. For the respiratory (breathing) they use epinephrine (adrenalin) and ephedrine; for that part of the nervous system controlling lungs, heart and digestion, they use a "quieting" drug such as beladonna and phenobarbital; for the liver, or hepatic system they recommend diet methods and liver preparations.

In cases where the asthmatic is allergic or sensitive to certain substances, tests for these substances are made. Among the new methods of treatment are the breathing exercises—blowing all air slowly from the lungs—and the use of short-wave treatments.

Remember, the patient's general makeup, obstructions of nose and sensitiveness of various substances, can each and all be the cause of asthmatic attacks.

QUESTION BOX

Q.—Will iron (marked ferrous sulfate), taken in vitamin capsules injure or have any ill effect on the teeth? How often should vitamin capsules be taken and may they be taken without advice of a doctor?

A.—I'm sorry but I try not to prescribe or suggest doses for any particular case. If you have a family physician a telephone call will give you the information. If you have no family physician, one visit to a physician would tell whether or not you really need the vitamins.

Taking Over

Waiter—Aren't you going to give me a tip? Why, the town's champion skiffint gives me a penny. Hornpuff—Then just take a look at me. I'm the new Champ.

Love, says the doctor, is just a softening of the heartier.

Sailors Don't Care

The "tubby" sailor was telling the old lady all about his life in the navy. "What sort of ship are you on?" she asked. "Submarine, mum," he replied. "And what is your particular job?" "Well, mum, I runs for'ard and tips her up when we wants to dive."

That Way

Simms—And you reckon that you save money by going over the household accounts every evening with your wife? Grant—Do I! By the time we balance it's too late to go anywhere.

The man who is described as a "hard drinker" usually takes it very easy.

What He Thought

Mrs. Brown took her husband to a mannequin parade. An evening gown worn by an extremely pretty model attracted her attention. "That would look nice at our party next week," she said, in the hope that her husband would buy it for her. "Yes," he answered. "Why not invite her?"

Finale.

First Actor—Whose funeral's that? Second Actor—Old Joe, the comedian's. "Great Scott. Is he dead?" "I don't think it's a rehearsal."

IF YOU'RE taking a midwinter vacation, you'll certainly want this tailored frock, in white shark-skin or luscious pastel flannel. And it's an excellent style to fit into town wardrobes, too—made up in bright flat crepe or a tailored print. Design No. 8814 is one of those slick, immaculately tailored styles that form the backbone of a busy woman's wardrobe the year-round. And the lines of stitching, the turned-down corners of the pockets, make this an unusually interesting version of your favorite button-front classic.

There's mighty little to the making, as you can see. Just a few long seams, a few simple darts, to create a tailored effect of faultless chic. And this is a style becoming alike to misses and to women. Sew chart included.

Pattern No. 8814 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20; 40, 42, 44, 46 and 48. Size 14 requires 4½ yards of 39-inch material without nap. Send order to:

QUINTUPLETS use MUSTEROLE for CHEST COLDS

Mother—Give Your CHILD This Same Expert Care!

At the first sign of the Dionne Quintuplets catching cold—their chests and throats are rubbed with Children's Mild Musterole—a product made to promptly relieve the DISTRESS of children's colds and resulting coughs.

The Quints have always had the best of care, so mother—you may be assured of using just about the BEST product made when you use Musterole. MORE than an ordinary "salve"—warming, soothing Musterole helps break up local congestion. Also made in Regular and Extra Strength for those preferring a stronger product.

All in Silence
A scolding wife can say endless disconcerting things, and she hits or misses; but a silent woman says everything.—H. G. Wells.

Miserable with backache?

WHEN kidneys function badly and you suffer a nagging backache, with dizziness, burning, scanty or too frequent urination and getting up at night when you feel tired, nervous, all upset... use Doan's Pills.

Doan's are especially for poorly working kidneys. Millions of boxes are used every year. They are recommended the country over. Ask your neighbor!

SELECTIVE SERVICE BOARD

No. 10 ANNOUNCES
CHANGE IN PERSONNEL

The Board announces a change in personnel. Miss Pearl E. Anderson resigned her position as chief clerk February 1, 1941. Miss Nancy Knight, Midlothian, Ill., has been promoted to chief clerk.

The Board will consider applications for the position of assistant clerk mailed during the next few days. The applicant must have a high school education and be able to handle office procedure.

This board has just received notice that our estimated March quota will be about 26 men. We hope that most of this quota can be filled by volunteers.

compelled to ask for his passports and so the incident was closed.

"THE HOWARDS OF VIRGINIA" NOW AT ROXY THEATRE

Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, the Roxy Theatre at Lockport presents that mighty epic of the nation "The Howards of Virginia," starring Cary Grant and Martha Scott in an awe-inspiring revealing story of the stirring struggle of Tory aristocracy and the simple men of the soil.

Friday and Saturday, the Roxy theatre will feature a superb twin billing of "Trail of the Vigilantes" with Broderick Crawford, Franchot Tone and Andy Devine. The second feature will be "She Couldn't Say No" with Roger Pryor and Eve Arden.

Westinghouse Festival Tinley Feb. 19

All plans for the annual Bettenhausen Westinghouse Festival have been completed in connection with the showing of the 1941 line of Westinghouse refrigerators and electrical appliances to be shown at the Tinley Park school gym Wednesday evening, Feb. 19th commencing at eight o'clock.

The program will consist of several brief demonstrations and a very special entertainment has been provided including moving pictures, also comic sketch. Door prizes will be awarded. Everyone invited and a good time is assured.

AMERICA FIRST COMMITTEE TO ALL CHAPTERS:

On Commending Your Representatives

Don't forget to write your Representatives who voted against House Resolution 1776 in last week's balloting in the House, and commend them strongly on their staunch stand against the Bill. Give them every encouragement. At the same time, be sure to write those who voted in favor of the Bill and let them know that you are conscious of their action.

For three weeks now Concentrate every day on both your Senators, on Senator Walter F. George, Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, Senate office building, Washington, D. C., and President Roosevelt.

We're fighting with our pens today—will it be with guns in six months? The answer lies with us.

Director of Organization
